Taster days offer pupils a preview of their futures

Primary school pupils experienced a 'taste of the future' at the end of the summer term.

Three Islington secondary schools: Mount Carmel, St. Aloysius and Arts and Media School Islington opened their doors to host taster days for primary school students from Ashmount, Montem, Pakeman, Ambler, Duncombe and Gillespie.

The initiative was organised by FutureZone, a voluntary collaborative of 15 primary and three Islington secondary schools that believe in sharing good practice and enriching the opportunities of Islington's children.

The taster days provided the year five children with an opportunity to experience lessons in a secondary school environment while parents and guardians could ask questions to a panel of teachers, current students and alumni regarding the transition process.

Feedback from the event was positive with both pupils and parents feeling enthusiastic and reassured to have such great educational establishments in the community.

“The FutureZone schools would like to extend their gratitude to our three secondary schools for an inspiring series of visits

Future Zone co-ordinator, Michael Walsh praised the transition week: “The FutureZone schools would like to extend their gratitude to our three secondary schools for an inspiring series of visits. Pupils returned to their primary schools excited about the opportunities that lie ahead while parents and guardians were impressed with the educational opportunities and options available to them within Islington. The 'taste of the future' week was the culmination of a year of transition events available to primary pupils.”
